151. The book of Genesis ends with the death of Joseph and contains the history of the first twenty-three hundred and sixty-nine years of the world. This book was written by Moses. This is the opinion of the Talmudists and so it is generally believed by all the Hebrews. {Talmudists, Baba-bathra, l. 1.} Job likely lived toward the end of the period of history that was recorded in Genesis. The following account of Job was given by Severus Sulpicius: {*Sulpicius Severus, Sacred History, l. 1. c. 13. 11:76}

"At this time lived Job, a man embracing the law of nature, and the knowledge of the true God and very righteous and rich in goods. He was renowned for the fact that neither the enjoyment of those riches corrupted him, nor the loss of them depraved him in any way. When he was plundered of all his goods by Satan, bereft of his children and at last tormented with grievous botches and sores in his body, he did not sin. Having first been commended by God himself, he was later restored to his former health and had double of what he possessed before."

Job 1

1. There was a man in the land of Uz, whose name was Job; and that man was blameless and upright, and one who feared God and shunned evil.

2. And seven sons and three daughters were born to him.

3. Also, his possessions were seven thousand sheep, three thousand camels, five hundred yoke of oxen, five hundred female donkeys, and a very large household, so that this man was the greatest of all the people of the East.
